There's Only One Way Leonard Can Knock Welsh Out To-Night, and That Is to Do It With One Punch.

Copyright, 1917, by The Press Publishing Co. (The New York Evening World). "O-NIGHT Freddy Weish "will risk his title" again. We quote that line because Freddy has done it so often before, and we flave yet to see the risk. There isn't much risk, the way Freddy works defense consists letting the other fellow do all the fighting while he taps and grabs, holds, clings closer than a brother, clinches and then clings some more. There was a time when Freddy did some of the fighting—but that was in the good old days. He made an exception to the general rule last an exception to the general rule last time he met Benny, on which occasion he uncorked a little fighting break he had been saving up for two or three years and outpointed the Harlemite. Since then the lightweight champion has been tapping and grabbing again. Also he has been getting the money, which, considering the approaching demise of boxing in New York State, may be the part of wisdom. Nobedy can say that he isn't a good business man.

Benny Leonard has been fighting very well for several months. He has knocked out a lot of good men. He flattened Ritchie Mitchell—the best lightweight in the West. Mitchell, beyond the frontiers of New Jersey, was regarded as the New Jersey, was regarded as the next world's champion. He came as sear as any one to unwrapping freedly Welsh's grips. Besides Mitchell, Benny has knocked

He is a great nisher when he has a man going, it Weish, unless knocked colder han a restaurant boiled potato, always has head enough to grab. And once with his arms wrapped around in opponent he has the Old Man of the Sea beaten to a pulp.

Of course we could say that this ought to be alightning fast scrapt to ught to be and no doubt it will be, on Benny's part. The Weish and of it will be interesting, but less writing. That is, unless Freddy has made up his mind to retire at issistend wants to come out and show comething in his last engagement. Its manager, Harry Pollok, is adertiaing that he has feund a new shtweight who will take Freddy's alace as a meal ticket de luxe. This lowever, may be only a stall to make lenny think Freddy is crumpling.
